

HERITAGE

CLASSICAL CHRISTIAN ACADEMY

Tracy Lee Simmons is a writer and journalist who has written widely for the New York Times, The Washington Post, The New York Sun, The Weekly Standard, The New Criterion, Crisis, and the Sewanee Review along with other newspapers and magazines. He served as associate editor for National Review under William F. Buckley Jr. and is the author of Climbing Parnassus, a bestselling case for classical education in America that won a Choice Award for 'Outstanding Academic Title' in 2002. He holds a master's degree in classics from Oxford and currently teaches Humanities and History in the Westover Honors Program at Lynchburg College.